LESSONS FROM TIN PLATE.

From a democratic source we have a convincing testimonial to the effectiveness of a protective tariff. Prior to the enactment of the McKinley tariff law, in 1890, the United States manufactured no tin plate whatever, but imported this commodity, chiefly from Wales. At the time of placing an import duty on tin plate the United States was importing a billion pounds a year. In 1912, under a republican tariff and before the war began, the United States imported only 620,000 pounds and exported 182,000,000 pounds. In 1916 the total production of tin plate in the United States amounted to 2,552,000 pounds.

At the time of the enactment of the McKinley tariff law it was asserted that an import duty on tin plate would be a tax upon the American consumer. Experience demonstrated the reverse. For as soon as the American tin plate industry had developed to such an extent that it could supply the American market, competition among domestic mills became so keen that the price was uniformly reduced below that the Americans had hitherto paid to the foreign manufacturer. The advantage, therefore, was twofold. The United States ceased to send money abroad for the development of foreign industries, purchase of foreign materials, the employment of foreign labor, building up of foreign finances, the encouragement of foreign shipping and kept the money at home to develop American industry, provide markets for American farm products and increase the prosperity in every line of American enterprise. The tribute which we had paid to a foreign tin trust was discontinued and under the competition of efficient American mills the price to the consumer was enormously reduced.

The tin plate industry serves as an illustration of the practical working of an import duty. Theoretically the tax must be paid by the consumer. That would be true if we continued to import the commodity and the tax were added to the cost of the article. But theory is overdrawn by the tests of experience. Instead of continuing to import the article and adding the tax to the original price, American industries are built up, competition arises among them, imports are cut off and because of the extent of domestic production, low costs of production are attained, enabling the producer to sell at a lower rate to the consumer.

Here are the figures published by our own department of commerce, provided over by a loyal democrat, showing the development of the tin plate industry following the enactment of the McKinley law:

Years	Imports in Pounds	Exports in Pounds
1891	1,016,489,074
1892	422,176,202
1899	108,484,826	205,910
1901	117,880,312	1,367,405
1904	126,909,360	8,107,666
1906	120,819,732	25,967,137
1911	95,319,730	70,199,398
1912	6,613,251	181,899,366
1914	48,877,947	105,899,762

CANDIDATES AND THEIR CAMPAIGNS.

This is a big election year in Nevada as well as in the nation. There is no lack of candidates. Citizens are literally falling over themselves to get their names on the ballot. It is the hope of the Bonanza that the battle of ballots will be fought clean from beginning to end. The first essential in working to this end is to avoid personalities. It might be well to clear to professional politicians by this time that attacks on the personal character of candidates never pays. This is true even in cases where facts justify the criticism. Politics is not personal. Issues are not personal. Personal vilification and abuse have no part in a campaign where public questions are up for determination. A campaign devoid of scandal will be a mark to the credit of the state of Nevada and to the credit of Tonopah.

Facts and arguments cannot be too forcefully presented in the coming campaign, national, state and county. But true Americans can disagree politically with their neighbors, or with strangers, on politics, and still treat the other fellow like a gentleman. Nothing is gained in politics by getting "sore," or by abuse, defamation or persecution of those who do not agree with us. When an election is over, with a true spirit of sportsmanship, Americans accept the result good naturedly.

In Tonopah there are more candidates for county and state legislative offices than in any election of recent years. The campaign will be a lively one, largely divided upon party issues. This is a creditable condition. The man who objects to partisanship objects to that which has made militant and vital every movement for human betterment. Any man who believes strongly in any cause is a partisan of that cause, and only those who strongly believe, largely achieve in behalf of any idea or ideal. The only man who is worth much in any cause is a partisan of that cause. But partisanship with men worth while does not mean unfairness, intolerance, or to resort to ungentlemanly or dishonest methods in politics or in any other field where battle is waged for a cause. Elimination of mere personalities in politics does not mean, of course, to exclude from consideration those characteristics of any candidate for a post of public responsibility which may have a bearing on his course as an official.

It is true that a half dozen political organizations, dissatisfied with the existing parties, have tried to form a merger and launch a new party, but the chances are that when they get the thing assembled the members will be more dissatisfied with that party than they were with the old ones.

AVIATION WILL BE DEVELOPED

(Correspondence Associated Press)
PARIS, June 20—France, whose strong war aerial force, in men and materials, has been allowed to disintegrate, is determined to win a big place in commercial aviation. P. E. Flandrin, aviation, under-secretary, told the chamber of deputies when it voted 399,000,000 francs for civil and military air service.

The development of the all-metal airplanes, he suggested, is one of the most important things being sought, and he said German attempts along this line "seem to me more dangerous than any clandestine deposits of war materials."

M. Flandrin told of typical flights in other nations, such as the New York to San Francisco race and the American postal routes, and then reported that the Paris-London air planes carried 420,000 miles carrying 800 passengers on 535 flights during the period from last September 1 to March 1, when winter atmospheric conditions are bad. On only 7 per cent of the trips was there more than an hour's delay, and only one accident, in which American passenger was killed.

PROGRESS IN WAR.
The progress of aviation during the war, M. Flandrin said, raised airplane high speed from 75 to 145 miles an hour, lowered the time for reaching altitudes by four-fifths; increased the power limit from 100 to 1000 horsepower; multiplied the carrying capacity by more than six, and quadrupled the flight range.

"Maintenance of way" of the London-Paris airplane, he said, comprised hangars, landing stations, meteorological stations, etc., cost 45,000 francs a mile, but can be cut in half as a result of the experience gained.

PURCHASES REDWOODS.
(Correspondence Associated Press)
HEALSBURG, Cal., July 24—Humboldt county recently purchased from its private owners a 40-acre grove of redwoods located on the state highway near Dyer'sville, a county point. The grove is said to be one of the finest in the state. The purchase was made in a move to save the redwoods.
